Mumbai: The Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) is looking at expansion in regions such as South Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, and countries under the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC). While the institution is currently in talks with governments to run different programmes in collaboration with universities there, in the long run, they are also exploring options of satellite campuses abroad. In fact, govern-

We already are running dual degree programmes with Australia's Monash and London's Queen Mary universities. We will be reaching out to the Indian diaspora in South Asia, GCC countries and Sub-Saharan Africa." The vice-chancellor was speaking about the institute's expansion plan post-NEP. Pro-vice-chancellor Bino Paul said the plan to have a TISS campus in some GCC countries "is at a very nascent stage. The immediate plan is to forge academic collaborations with institutions there and explore the possibilities of having joint programmes. One of our team is also currently in talks with the Bhutan government for collaborations."

In line with NEP 2020, the institute has identified 17 sustainable development goals and programmes are being worked out around them. This year, the institute launched a BS Programme in Analytics and Sustainability at the Mumbai campus, which saw over 22,000 applications for 30 seats. An undergraduate degree in their flagship social work programme (BSW) also saw many aspirants this year in the Mumbai campus. In the coming year, TISS is also planning to offer a multidisciplinary MUMBAI: The Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) announced on Wednesday that it plans to establish new campuses both within India and abroad, and foster strategic collaborations with foreign universities.

The TISS's decision comes on the heels of the announcement by the Indian Institute of Technology, Madras, that it was setting up an IIT campus in Tanzania. "Our team recently visited Bhutan and engaged in fruitful conversations with their government," said pro vice chancellor Bino Paul. He added that the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) nations too had also shown interest in developing a TISS campaign on their soil.

These expansion plans, said Shalini Bharat, vice-chancellor of TISS deemed university, are part of the New Education Policy (NEP) implementation which will include introducing innovative courses in social sciences.

Most recently, TISS signed an agreement with Monash University in Australia and Queen Mary University in London for a students' exchange programme. "Our greater vision is to accommodate the demands of the NEP and introduce cutting-edge courses in social sciences. We also plan to expand our campuses within the country," he said.

The TISS has four campuses in Mumbai and Tuljapur in Maharashtra, and two others at Hyderabad and Guwahati with a total student strength of 8000. While land, he acknowledged, was a problem in Mumbai, it wasn't the case in their other campuses. "Our focus is to then expand these other campuses," Paul said while addressing the media during the launch of the NEP-compliant Skill Education and Innovative Teachers Education Program.

One of the premier social sciences institutions in India, TISS offers four undergraduate programs, including BA in Social Sciences and BSc Analytical and System Studies. "This year we received an overwhelming 18,000 to 22,000 applications for just 30 available seats," said Paul.

During the launch of the new courses at the School of Vocational Education (TISS-SVE), Professor Madhushree Sekhar, the dean of TISS-SVE, said, "We are delighted to introduce the NEP-compliant skill education program. Admissions for this course will commence from the academic year 2023-24, marking a fresh start for students pursuing skill education and teachers training at TISS."

from police custody. The miscreants first killed the 56-year-old man on the spot, the FIR said.

They then assaulted three women from the family and paraded them naked while recording videos of the incident, the FIR said. HT has seen a copy of the FIR. One of the women, 21, was allegedly gang raped, the FIR said, adding that the miscreants also killed her 19-year-old brother for trying to intervene.

"The three women managed to escape from the spot with the help of some locals," the FIR said. The FIR, citing the village head's complaint, said the men belonged to Meitei community.

TISS plans international expansions in GCC, and Sub-Saharan countries

PALLAVI SMART
MUMBAI, JULY 19

TATA INSTITUTE of Social Science (TISS) is looking at major international expansions, especially in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) and Sub-Saharan countries along with the South Asia region.

While the GCC countries are keen on having a campus, the institute is currently talking to different governments for academic collaborations.

The institute on Wednesday announced the launch of National Education Policy (NEP)- compliant skill education programme and the innovative teacher education programme for the academic year 2023-24.

While elaborating on future plans in line with the NEP, the institute authorities spoke about the need for a global approach.

Notifying that satellite campuses or academic collaborations are among some options available for the institute for its plans for globalization, Director and Vice Chancellor of the TISS, Prof. Shalini Bharat, said, "We have already tied up with several universities abroad to offer dual degree programmes. Monash University from Sydney in Australia and Queen Mary University from London are some of the examples. We are also exploring other options to have programmes in partnerships with our own ecosystem, along with possibilities if we could have something in other countries."

"But instead of replicating the existing programmes, we are looking at offering programmes which are unique," prof Bharat added.

Elaborating further on the expansion plans, Prof. Bino Paul, Pro-Vice Chancellor at the TISS, said, "We are looking at academic collaborations with GCC and Sub-Saharan countries. The GCC countries have shown interest in opening a campus. But those plans are at a very nascent stage. We are currently focusing on offering new-age academic programmes in these regions."

The institute has also started working to develop academic programmes in line with the 17 sustainable development goals (SDGs) defined by the United Nations.

Professor Paul shared that the institute envisions to cater to local needs of the respective countries with such collaborations.
