1. About Tata Institute of Social Sciences

1.1. Our History

The Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) was established in 1936 as the Sir Dorabji Tata Graduate School of Social Work. In 1944, it was renamed as the Tata Institute of Social Sciences. The year 1964 was an important landmark in the history of the Institute, when it was declared Deemed to be a University under Section 3 of the University Grants Commission Act (UGC), 1956.

Since its inception, the vision of the TISS has been to be an institution of excellence in higher education that continually responds to changing social realities through the development and application of knowledge, towards creating a people-centered, ecologically sustainable and just society that promotes and protects dignity, equality, social justice and human rights for all. The TISS works towards its vision through:

- Creation and provision of socially relevant and high quality professional education in a wide range of inter-disciplinary areas of Social Sciences to a larger number of students from all sections of the society in the country.
- Facilitation of autonomous research and dissemination of knowledge.
- Support knowledge creation through strong M.Phil. and Ph.D. programmes and Post-Doctoral scholars.

2. TISS Guwahati Campus

The social change process in Northeast India is driven by confrontations between various power centered and a deep rooted sense of insecurity and fear where there is a struggle for dominance between state and community, tribes and non-tribes, tribes and tribes, tribes and foreigners and community against individuals rather than any clear vision of development. Opposing groups are extremely powerful socially, politically and even in physical numbers and are able to inflict severe damage on other opposing groups.

In this dynamic and fast altering scenario, educational institutions, especially those with the capacity to engage proactively with both state and non-state actors and whose sole intent is to advance social development, have an important role to play. Moreover, TISS has been in constant engagement with the north-east region in the past through various projects of the Government, support to Universities and NGOs, and also through its students and alumni from the region. However the same was more fleeting and task centered. With the restructuring that took place in the institute in the year 2006, there was a clear realisation that a need existed to engage with the region more concretely. Understanding that one would need to be present in the region to contribute to its various processes, the TISS began an exploration to develop a strategy for engagement to respond to the region in a more systematic and coordinated manner primarily because of the need for an educational institute to engage with people and development processes in whatever capacity possible especially in the light of the complexities that exist.

The goal of establishing Guwahati Campus is to undertake education, training, research and related activities across eight states of North-East India which will enhance the capacities of organizations, communities, states and market in this region especially focusing on the indigenous communities, including state and non-state organizations in the sub-region. This is to facilitate the capacities of different stake holders in communities, state and market, and to contribute to social justice and the overall social development processes.

Against this backdrop and in order to cater more specifically to the capacity building needs of the North Eastern states, TISS set up the Guwahati campus.

This campus plans to:

1. Generate new theories and ideas that would exemplify processes of empowerment.
2. Develop new models of intervention and practice theories.
3. Conceptualise new methods of intervention within Social Work Practice.
4. Actively generate new knowledge in interdisciplinary areas of society, economy, culture and environment impacting people's lives and livelihoods.
5. Facilitate debate on critical aspects of transformation in economy, society, culture, environment through seminars, conferences and round tables involving State and non-State actors.
6. Develop faculty exchange programmes with Universities located in the region focusing on the developmental issues in North-East region.
7. Strengthen North-East TISS alumni by maintaining database and conducting meets of TISS alumni at least once/twice a year.
8. Collaborate with other institutes/organizations/universities in the region.

2.1. TISS Guwahati Campus: Milestones

2006 The North Eastern Regional Centre was established at Guwahati. Apart from short term trainings on research, community mobilisation, gender, a diploma on community organization and development practice, which was designed to build capacities of grassroots development practitioners was introduced and four batches of over 450 students graduated successfully from this programme over the years.

2008 The Government of Assam invited the TISS to establish a campus in Assam. There was a regional consultation where committees with senior faculty members from TISS Mumbai visited all the states of northeast and TISS Campus in Guwahati was established.

2009 Government of Assam has awarded 24.5 acres of land to the TISS to build the campus;

2010 The foundation stone for the campus was laid in the presence of Mr. Ratan Tata by the Chief Minister of Assam Shri Tarun Gogoi and Mr. Krishna Kumar the then Chairperson of the Institute.

The School of Social Sciences and Humanities (SSSH) has four inter-disciplinary centres and a core discipline building centre that prepares students to address a wide range of questions that confront our society today. The School encourages its students to build on critical questions arising from the field, while applying the knowledge acquired in classrooms. All the Centres that constitute SSSH have built on their networks and linkages with grassroots organisations, industry and the vibrant community of social science and humanities institutes in the region and beyond. The courses offered by each Centre reflect the School's emphasis on grounded, field-based knowledge that is geared towards specific skills that will help students navigate the complex world outside. They are also intended to equip students for a wide range of exciting careers that are emerging in the region and around the world.

The School of Social Sciences and Humanities (SSSH) offers the following M.A. programmes

M.A. in Ecology, Environment and Sustainable Development

M.A. in Sociology and Social Anthropology

Students admitted to post graduate degree programmes in all TISS campuses come with under-graduate degree in arts, science, humanities, social sciences, engineering and technology, medicine and allied disciplines, agriculture, law and other disciplines. Hence in order to enable the students gain nuanced understanding of the nation and its people — social, cultural, economic and political contexts— the Institute offers a 8 credit Foundation Course.

4.1. Foundation Course (FC)

The Foundation Course (FC) is divided into six modules of different credits each. The FC focuses on the developing societies, economies and politics with emphasis on experiences of societies, economies and politics, rather than focusing on theories. Theories may be used while narrating, but will not form the core of the narrative style. All the six modules will be taught one after the other, rather than concurrently. The FC is taught over 120 hours of 60 lectures and carries a weightage of 8 credits over two semesters (first and second). The FC modules are compulsory for all the M.A. programmes except disciplinary M.A. programme in Sociology and Social Anthropology.

4.2. School of Social Science and Humanities

4.2.1 M.A. in Ecology, Environment and Sustainable Development (M.A.EESD)

Today the world is facing serious problems due to human population explosion, poverty, inequality, pollution, political manipulation of the public for corporate benefit, the abuse of public and natural resources, and the dangers of toxic emissions, to name a few. By the turn of the millennium, as the dangers of global warming and the consequent climate change became evident, the limitations of a human-centric view of environment became clear. Therefore, in the recent years there has been a shift to a more holistic approach based on ecology – a view that sees humankind as part of an interconnected web of life. It becomes imperative to understand the interactions between the human systems and the natural world. The course will help students to develop professional skills for planning and implementing strategies to address various conservation related issues by taking into consideration related social issues.

All the courses in the proposed M.A. programme will work towards an elaborate understanding of Environment, Ecology and Sustainable development. The programme is a combination of theoretical knowledge, awareness of the contemporary environmental issues and fieldwork experiences. The aim of the course is to provide knowledge and skills to the students, which will help them understand the existing problems effecting our environment, possible ways to reduce such impacts and increase awareness in communities. This professional course will give students the opportunity to understand the institutional structures concerning environment both at the local and international level, as well as the policies, issues and problems of India and strategies to address these.

Objectives of the programme are to make students understand :

- Human-environment interaction and the different approaches to studying environment and ecology.
- Interrelationships of resource use, economics, politics and their impact on the environment;
- Environmental issues and their linkages to politics of development at the local, regional and global level.
- Issues in environmental economics and natural resource economics.
- Problems and debates of developing countries.
- Skill required for analysing and developing strategy to address ecological and environmental issues by taking into consideration the social perspective.

Students will undertake supervised research projects, to be submitted at the end of the year. The topic for the dissertation shall be taken from any of the above courses. The distribution for the scoring of the dissertation will be between the process of research (30%) and the outcome of the research (70%). The students will be aided by courses on research methods in the second and third semesters and through supervisors allotted to students based on their research topics.

4.2.1.3 Assessment

Assessment will be based on a mix of classroom group assignments, individual assignments and examinations. The mode of assessment will be decided before the course begins and will be articulated in the first class of each course in order to prepare the students. Attendance and classroom participation will also be part of the assessment and can be assigned a maximum of 5-10% of the weightage.

4.2.2. M.A. in Labour Studies and Social Protection (M.A.LSSP)

In the last three decades, there has been a fundamental change in employment patterns and employment relations. Poor social security models have made labour markets more vulnerable than any other time in past. Keeping this in view, the M.A. programme in Labour Studies and Social Security (M.A.LSSS) was introduced at Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Guwahati Campus from the academic year of 2013. Considering suggestions from internal review committee and having consultation with experts from International Labour Organisations (ILO), International Center for Development and Decent Work (ICDD) and other experts in the field of labour, the curriculum was revised and subsequently renamed as the M.A. programme in Labour Studies and Social Protection from the academic year 2014.

The programme is aimed at preparing experts and professionals in engaged in issues relating to work and employment, laws and policies, and research. How workers manage their social security needs is the prime thrust of this programme. The course highlights changing nature of employment patterns, labour relations, trade union movement, collective bargaining, migration, labour market, role of corporate governance, occupational safety and health, and labour laws. This is an interdisciplinary programme that assembles concepts and theories from various disciplines like Economics, History, Law, Political Science and Sociology to understand functions and dynamics of work and employment.

Besides classroom lectures, discussions, case studies and presentations; there is a strong fieldwork component in the programme. Students are trained to work on large scale data set, undertake primary research and produce a systematic and coherent report. Considering the need for building experts in academic and professional world, they are also exposed to different software packages such as SPSS and STATA (quantitative data analysis software), and ATLAS.ti (qualitative data analysis software). The integration of theory and practice has enabled them to think critically, analyses the problems carefully and develop a suitable policy framework.

4.2.2.1 Key Features

- Focus on perennial problem of unemployment, underemployment and informal employment in developing economies in general, and Indian economy in particular.
- An in-depth understanding of the conceptual and theoretical understanding of different socio-economic and relevant policy issues pertaining to the labour studies.
- The course is interdisciplinary in nature that assembles concepts and theories from various disciplines like Economics, History, Law, Political Science and Sociology.
- The course has strong field work component in terms of internship, field work and writing a dissertation on a labour-related topic to provide a practical grasp of issues.
- Given the geographical location of the north east campus, students are encouraged to work on various issues pertaining to labour in and around Guwahati in first and third semesters. Students are placed in various organizations for their internship across India and neighbouring countries in the second semester

4.2.2.2 Programme Structure and Curriculum Design

Perspective Building

Perspective courses provide foundational knowledge on the aspects of labour related issues studies and social protection in India as well as in the West in context of both formal and informal set-ups.

Analytical Skills

Courses are specifically designed to impart skills and techniques of data analysis, qualitative and quantitative, and apply these in development research and internship.

Experiential Learning

The field work and internship in the labour studies and social security curriculum is designed to provide a practical grasp of issues relating to labour. Given the geographical location of the north east campus, students will be encouraged to work on various issues pertaining to labour in and around Guwahati in first and second semesters. Students will be placed in various organizations for their internship across India and neighbouring countries in the third semester.

Employability

After successful completion of the course students may opt for higher studies in labour studies related disciplines and issues, or may engage themselves in various government departments which are dealing with labour issues (such as, Ministry of Labour and Employment, Ministry of Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises, Institute of Applied Manpower Research, Ministry of Rural Development, Ministry of Housing and Urban Poverty Alleviation and etc.), and research institutions, university departments, or as experts in various national and international non-governmental organisations, law firms and corporate sector.

4.2.2.3 Field Exposure/Practical

Industry Visit

The main objective of field exposure or field practical is to develop a comprehensive understanding of the field reality and its link with the theory. North Eastern Region (NER) has no remarkable industrial growth except traditional tea, oil and wood based industries in Assam; and coal, small and medium industries in Meghalaya. In recent years the “Look East Policy” of Government of India has made North East more important and strategic even in context of industry. Industries in this region have been classified mainly into two broad types: agro-based industries (tea industry, sugar industry, grain mill products industry of rice, oil and flour mills, food processing industry and the textile industry) and forest-based industries (plywood industry, saw-mill industry, paper and paper pulp industry). Studying different industries and its labour standard is core area of this course. There is dearth of studies exploring labour issues and industry in the region too. Therefore, hands-on experiences while visiting different industries shall provide practical understanding of industry and labour standard in that setting.

Informal Sector

With low industrial growth and growing population pressure in NER, informal sector becomes manor source of livelihood in the region. There is hardly any study which addresses labour issues in the informal sector in the region. Thus students are expected to conduct study (group or individual) on the informal sector and labour in this sector including informal workers in the industries. The field based study will enable students understanding the phenomenon in the context of current development.

4.2.2.4 Internship

Students are expected to do internship with different organizations. The objective behind internship is to provide a scope for students understand the structure of different organizations, industry, and labour at the grass root level (including trade union) while closely working with them. Field supervisors will be assigned in the organizations and students are expected to share their experiences and findings through presentations.

4.2.2.5 Dissertation

An original master’s thesis will be a requisite at the end of this programme for all students of the M.A. programme. The main objective of dissertation is to develop a comprehensive understanding of the field reality and its link with the theory. Students will undertake supervised research projects to be submitted at the end of the fourth semester. Students may take any topic related to labour issues for their dissertation. The dissertation may be based on primary or secondary data. The work should be original and research based. Supervisor will be assigned by end of the first semester or beginning of the second semester.

4.2.2.6 Assessment

Assessment for each course will be based on a mix of group assignments, individual assignments, class presentation and written examinations. The method of assessment for the B.A.S.S. courses may vary according to various courses. The course instructor usually decides the nature of assessment prior to the beginning of the course and informs the concern students and examination department accordingly.

4.2.3. M.A. in Peace and Conflict Studies

4.2.3.1 Vision Statement

The twentieth century was marked by both tragic series of violent wars, as well as the decolonization of Asia and Africa. It was, in every sense, a contradictory century of oppression and possibilities of emancipation of humankind. Entering into the first quarter of the twenty first century, the world is still beset by deep-rooted and multi-layered inequalities that fuel unrest and conflicts in different parts of the world. As contemporary societies come to terms with the aftermath of unilateralist political change and continued militarization of different parts of the world, one has to emphasise the need for articulating an alternative, historically and ethically grounded vision of politics and society. It is with this vision that the Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Guwahati Campus, intends to offer Two-Year M.A. programme in Peace and Conflict Studies (PaCS).

4.2.3.2 Mission Statement

The MA, in Peace and Conflict Studies (PaCS), being offered by Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Guwahati Campus, reflects the Institute's engagement with issues of justice and peace, as well as acknowledges the Campus' unique location and expertise in being able to impart skill-based, philosophically grounded and employment oriented degrees to prospective students. It has three principal components spread across four semesters, which combine to offer students a creative mix of theoretical grounding and empirical explorations, field-based experience, and an introduction to the world of policy making, donors and agencies working on peace building and conflict analysis.

The Programme has three major feature constituents: (a) course work, (b) field induction, and (c) dissertation, which includes fieldwork and writing. Each constituent is linked to the other in a manner that allows the student to make the most of a conscientious focus on the history, sociology and politics of conflict and violence, as well as ensuring that she/he is able to engage with wider range of field-based issues with peace practitioners, policy makers and agencies.

4.2.3.3 Objectives of the Programme

- To go beyond strategic/security studies and international relations approaches to peace and conflict studies
- To produce high calibre practitioners, interventionists, writers, and researchers with practical, empirical and theoretical knowledge of violence and peace.
- To develop critical skills in research, advocacy, and communication on issues of peace and conflict
- To understand new dimensions of conflict resolution, such as, tourism, development
- To critically appreciate traditional peace building approaches and perspectives on reconciliation
- To research varied sites like memory and history as resource for conflict and reconciliation
- To recognise gender-based violence and resistances against militarism and encourage ethical, sensitive and empathetic methods of studying peace and conflict
- To develop theoretically sound and empirically rich studies on conflict and peace-building processes, particularly from the northeast of India

4.2.4 M.A. in Sociology and Social Anthropology

Sociology and Social Anthropology as two distinct disciplines had its origin in Europe. Sociology emerged as the study of predominantly industrial society and Social Anthropology as the study of non-industrial societies. The distinction was implanted in India too. Today, there is a need to interrogate the separation of the two disciplines, especially in light of the self-reflective turn that both have taken over the past two decades, both in India and in other parts of the world.

In keeping with these realities, the programme is designed to integrate the discipline of Sociology and Social Anthropology with a view to have a comparative and systematic understanding of the society and its institutions. Such a programme is most suited considering the regional location of TISS, Guwahati Campus, where an entire region is on the cusp of a profound social, economic and cultural transformation.

4.2.4.1 Objectives of the Programme

This programme in sociology and social anthropology emphasises interdisciplinary and critical approaches to social issues. It is designed to provide students with the necessary knowledge and basic skills in understanding society and different theoretical orientations. For this purpose, the programme aims to:

- Integrate the discipline of sociology and social anthropology with a view to have a comparative and systematic understanding of society and its institutions.
- Develop the students' understanding and analytical abilities in major social anthropological perspectives.
- To have the basic skills to understand how the simple and complex society functions and changes.
- To ground students theoretically and methodologically, in order to enable them understand national and regional specificities of contemporary societies in India in particular and its South/Southeast Asian neighbourhood in general.

4.2.4.2 Key Features of the Programme

The programme has three principal components spread over four semesters: - (a) course work in perspective building, theoretical groundings, social economic and political issues, (b) field work, (c) dissertation. In the final year students will write a supervised dissertation on a topic of their choice; this is a great opportunity to study an area of interest for the students, and also to exercise the skills they have developed to future employers, or to further academic endeavours. The programme aims to provide students with employability skills including research methods and design, interviewing, statistical analysis, essay writing and ethnographic methods.

4.3 School of School Work

Introduction

The volatility and instability of socio-economic, political and environmental conditions in recent years have had ramifications on the access, use and ownership of resources. The current situation in the world is one where one cannot function in isolation from the market forces. Yet when working on the issues of human betterment and social justice, one cannot let the markets determine the course of action as that might risk positioning profits over people or the planet itself. A well meaning idea meant to make the lives of people works best when backed by a keen understanding of how to translate it into overall socio-economic betterment for the same people it seeks to address and work for.

Research shows that states where social development has been given precedence over, and at the cost of economic opportunities and growth, have been marked by an economic stagnation and a decelerated growth. Therefore, ideas centered on social development alone might be insufficient in a situation where there are no support mechanisms for them to sustain.

There can be a commensurate lesson one can draw from such a scenario, one where the endeavor should be to look at development more holistically instead of an approach which isolates social development from other processes.

Therefore when we look at equipping young people with the knowledge, attitudes and skills to be a skilled worker in the field of social work, coupling it with insights and training with an entrepreneurial lens might hold the key to providing long lasting solutions to our social problems. The Tata Institute of Social Sciences aims to bridge this very gap in social work education and create a cadre of young entrepreneurs who work with communities for social justice and aim to find innovative solutions towards the same

The vision of the Master's Programme on Social Work from 2013-14 at TISS Guwahati Campus has shifted from generic approach in 2012-13 to specialisations in 2013-14 in four areas- Counselling (CO), Community Organization and Development Practice (CODP), Livelihoods and Social Entrepreneurship (LSE) and Public health (PH). The students are exposed to multi-dimensional courses which are meant to enhance their practical knowledge of understanding relevant concepts which are constantly emerging in the social work sector. Associations with resource organizations, experts and practical assignments are emphasised to give the students an opportunity to explore their specific interests and imbibe practical skills of knowledge, attitude and innovation in their respective courses.

The geo- political setting of the TISS Guwahati would make the programme relevant to students of Social Work in India and the North East but would not be limited to them. The TISS Guwahati is designed to become a hub of social science education and research in South and South- East Asia. Students from the Hindu-Kush Himalayan region countries of Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, China, Nepal and Pakistan would also find the course and field work settings most relevant.

The First Year of the Social Work Programme, i.e. Semester I & II focuses on the social work practice courses along with the foundation courses, field work and rural practicum. The Second Year focuses on the specialisations.

Foundation Courses (FC)

The Foundation Courses in the M.A. in Social Work will ensure that the students of Social Work have a basic understanding of issues related to development, poverty, patterns of discrimination and exclusion, political economy of globalisation and the state, and civil society dynamics. Further, in keeping with the vision of the institute, the coursework is grounded in an exposure to the major national and global socio-political issues relevant to a better understanding of society and the state.

Choice Based Credit System (CBCS)

Depending upon the interests, learning needs, and aims of the students, CBCS gives the opportunity to choose interdisciplinary, intra-disciplinary and skill-based courses from a pool of courses from various programmes within the School of Social work. Thus CBCS offers additional avenues of learning beyond the core subjects for holistic development.

Social Work Practice Courses (SW)

The core curriculum is conceived as a set of courses that is fundamental to attaining a firm knowledge of Social Work and generalist competence in the allied fields. The Core Curriculum represents those elements of theory and practice knowledge which is indispensable to general practice (not specialised) of the discipline. These courses will provide the skill and knowledge base to students in the MA Social Work Programme. In keeping with this vision, the programme draws from the real world and equips students with the best practices and understanding of social work practice most relevant to their course of study.

Specialisation Courses

The specialisation courses include Counselling, Community Organization and Development Practice, Livelihoods and Social Entrepreneurship and Public Health. The aim here is to foster change leaders who have a comprehensive and nuanced understanding as well as skills in the four areas.

Pedagogy

The pedagogy will consist of theoretical inputs coupled with reflections drawn from the students' own experiences in field work and in the past. Emphasis will be on self learning, project specific engagement and library work. There will be a mix of lectures (input sessions) and tutorials (discussion and reflection by students) in order to encourage critical analysis of issues discussed in class.

The evaluative modes will encourage analysis and applications of the theories and concepts learnt. The course provides time for self study and a reflection over the concepts learnt in class. The students are also engaged through workshops that are designed to bring them together in groups on issues to encourage experiential learning and build skills. These workshops will be non-credit but compulsory and will be linked to course work.

Field Work

The field work in the social work curriculum is designed to provide a practical grasp of the societal issues and complexities. Students are placed in a range of governmental and non-governmental organisations in rural, urban, and tribal settings across the country in order to build exposure to best traditions for social work practice.

The field work will be in the block form in all 4 semesters (except in the Centre for Counselling which will be in block form in the 1st and 2nd semesters and concurrent/block in the 3rd and 4th semesters). As far as experiential learning goes, field work provides ample scope for learning from the various settings and also facilitates cross-learning on issues. The purpose of the field work curriculum is to facilitate the development of a professional social worker who can enter the practice arena in any setting of practice and be able to apply the profession's knowledge base, perform direct social work practice skills and act according to social work ethics and values.

At the agency placement, the student will have the opportunity to integrate theory and practice, and as such, connect the theoretical and conceptual contributions of the classroom with the world of practice under the guidance of the Field Work Supervisors.

Much of the attitudinal and skill components of the curriculum will be realised through field work. As a means to facilitate the same, field work seminars will be held at the end of each academic year, where the students can present and discuss the realities in their field work situation. This will ensure that students are exposed not only to their field work setting but to a whole variety of issues and intervention styles.

Rural Practicum

A student of the M.A. Social Work is expected to possess a good grasp of the analysis of issues concerning development. For their rural practicum, the students will be encouraged to explore rural areas and work in and beyond the North East. This is to expose students to the idea of 'rural' and the complex of problems and issues concerning the rural. While many students may come from a rural background themselves, positioning themselves as social workers will mean looking at the rural and rural issues with a new lens. This will aid the students in developing an understanding of the major patterns of discrimination, exclusion and issues of social and environmental justice when working for the people.

The Rural Practicum will take place at the end of the 2nd semester and will be a compulsory, non-credit component of the 2 year programme. The duration of the practicum will be 2 weeks.

Dissertation

An original master's thesis will be a requisite at the end of this programme for all students of MASW programme. Students will undertake supervised research projects, to be submitted at the end of the year. In keeping with the School of Social work practice, the distribution for the dissertation will be between the process of research (30%) and outcome of the research (70%). The students will be aided by workshops to build their capacities on research. The aim of these workshops will be to help the student articulate the research questions and design a strong, compelling research.

4.3.1 M.A. Social Work in Counselling (MASW-CO)

With the quagmire of complexities that exist in today's world, interwoven with challenges of poverty and deprivation, people are uncertain of their futures creating conditions of stress which are extremely difficult to cope with. Mental stress is generally high and counselling services are very inadequate in this country. There is a dearth of counsellors in hospitals, schools, family settings and rehabilitation centres.

It is imperative to build the social work experience, which had always used counselling as one of its skills, to consolidate and further develop. Hence the M.A. in social work, specialisation in counselling will enhance the counselling skills in social work practice contexts. The programme is tailored to suit social workers working in a wide range of organizational and community contexts as well as individuals in a family. During the programme, the students will not only study counselling techniques, approaches but will get an in-depth knowledge of Mental Health in India and engage in research related to the subject.

On completion of the programme, students will be able to work in corporate organizations, families, family courts, disability sector, feminist counselling centres, correctional settings, school, universities and educational institutions, rehabilitation centres, during disasters, with the elderly, child care and adoption centres, and in the rural areas with programmes on health, education & livelihood .

A student opting for M.A. in social work specialisation in counselling will study the foundation courses and the social work practice courses. In addition, their field work in second year will be in counselling settings and the M.A. dissertation is related to their specialisation.

4.3.2 M.A. Social Work in Community Organization and Development Practice (MASW-CODP)

The community has been an important site of social work practice right from the earliest days of the professionalization of social work, as seen in the Community Service Organizations and Settlement House movements in the US and the UK in the late nineteenth century. In India too, as the profession became established in the immediate pre-independence period and particularly in the post-Independence period, community organization acquired increasing prominence in social work practice.

Over the years, the focus of social work community organization practice has also changed along with changing trends in social work practice. From an initial emphasis on charitable activities and urban-based work (similar to that seen in the US and UK), in the 1950s the focus shifted to the massive Community Development Programme (CDP) being implemented in India, with focus on rural development activities through government support. The limitations of this approach became evident with the passage of time, and came to a head during the social and political ferment in India in the 1960s. Critics questioned the efficacy of government programmes and challenged the notion that social workers should orient their work around these programmes. Community organization was emphasised as an important means of social action for social change. Increasing involvement of voluntary organizations in community organization, development and social change was the most important contribution of the 70s and 80s, one that still occupies centre-stage in community organization and development practice. Simultaneously from the 80s there has been greater interest in community organization in urban settings, shifting away from the erstwhile almost exclusive focus on rural areas.

The period after the 90s has posed a new set of challenges for community organisers and development workers. The ascent of neoliberalism as the primary ideology governing the state's development interventions has meant a steady withdrawal of the state from development activities. In fact, a critical engagement with state policy as an integral part of social work practice has become even more vital, with neoliberal economic policy and structural adjustment programmes (along with the waning of leftist and socialist ideology) having led to further impoverishment of the marginalized sections of society and widening inequalities in society. Social security nets have been weakened and the state often fails to provide even basic welfare services to the masses, or demands that they pay for these services. The assault on labour rights, the liberal granting of permissions to the private sector to undertake industrial and mining projects, and the launch of infrastructure development projects have all led to large-scale displacement, dispossession and consequent migration, altering the very nature of communities. These communities have been fragmented, leaving people cut off from their traditional natural and cultural resources, leaving them at the mercy of the market, which, to use Joan Robinson's evocative phrase, often operates as 'the hidden hand which can work by strangulation'.

Tribal groups have been disproportionately affected by these changes, as development initiatives have caused huge amounts of displacement and dispossession in areas traditionally inhabited by these communities. Also, the weakening and loss of traditional knowledge and structures of governance and social organization in these communities have left them without any recourse but to migrate to cities where they occupy the lowest rungs of the socio-economic structure, usually as unskilled labour.

Along with these changes, there have been changes in the framework of community organization practice. Coinciding with the withdrawal of the state, international donor NGOs, which earlier used to keep in the background, have become extremely interventionist in their approach, often setting the agenda for development programmes. This has led to increasing numbers of community organization practitioners working directly for these agencies rather than for grassroot NGOs supported by them. A heartening development in recent times, though, has been the move away from the funded NGO structure and the consequent 'NGO-ization of society' towards progressive and democratic people's movements which have mounted a challenge to the dominant neoliberal development paradigm and vociferously demanded a participatory, pro-people form of development.

The current scenario demands critical engagement, at both the theoretical and practical levels, on the part of the sensitive community organiser. Working from a pro-poor, pro-marginalized groups perspective, the community organiser needs to work with communities towards extending the spaces for engagement with the state, and resisting the multiple onslaughts on their rights and entitlements. There is a need to evolve alternate models of development that are pro-poor and also environment-friendly. It is with these challenges that TISS Guwahati is offering this two-year M.A. Social Work programme in Community Organization and Development Practice.

Objectives of the Programme

To help students develop an understanding of the centrality of community in the experience of society, economy and polity and hence, the significance of community mobilizing and organising.

To equip students with the knowledge base, skills and techniques for becoming an effective community organiser and development practitioner.

To build students' understanding of the political economy of development, poverty and marginalisation, and ways of intervening effectively from a pro-poor perspective.

To produce members of a trained work force who can act as catalysts to bring about positive change in society using enterprise and an in depth understanding of communities and their environment within a framework of social work values.

Attendance and classroom participation will also form part of the assessment and can be assigned a maximum of 5-10% of the weightage.

4.3.3 M.A. Social Work in Livelihoods and Social Entrepreneurship (M.A.SW-LSE)

In this specialisation we attempt to provide the students with knowledge, skills and attitudes to innovate and initiate work with optimal social impact. The objectives of the course are to understand the linkages with existing and livelihood initiatives, rights and opportunities which affect the most vulnerable communities. The course will also instil social entrepreneurial attribute in young professionals and equip them to build entrepreneurial venture in the emerging social sectors.

The mode of learning will have a blend of theoretical analysis of existing models of social entrepreneurship across the South Asian sub-continent and intensive action research on workable models for livelihood trends and newer possibilities. Students will have the opportunity to be associated with some of the leading social entrepreneurs of the country and also of the SAARC countries with flexible visa regimes. The strategic location of the North East will enable the students with diverse learning opportunities on the process of regional cooperation which affects fair trade practices and has a direct impact of human development. It has been a constant endeavour to establish the inverse correlation between social unrest and job security. This specialisation will enable the students to engage in research, self-start projects and consultancy initiatives which will somewhere have an impact on the dismal graph of unemployment and social business.

The programme aims at a two-fold approach for placement. Firstly, the students will be encouraged and facilitated to start their own social enterprises. Secondly, every effort will be made to place the students looking for final job placement such that they may get recruited through campus placements.

4.3.4 M.A. Social Work in Public Health (M.A.SW-PH)

According to World Health Organization, "the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being." The determinants and defence of health at the population level have been important concerns of the academia and policymakers for long-time. History has witnessed many efforts to appreciate and analyse public health problems and to design and evaluate actions to improve public health. Though India is one of the signatories of the Alma Ata declaration of 1978, which aimed at “Health for All by 2000”, some of the health indicators are worse than that of the least developed countries. While struggling to deal with double burden of diseases, the issues such as severe malnutrition and maternal mortality continue to unsettle whatever little progress India made in the past few decades.

Even when the Indian economy is growing, the issue of access to affordable health services still troubles bulk of the population. India being one of the most privatised health systems in the world, the out of pocket expenditure on health is one of the highest in the world. With the introduction of WTO-TRIPS compliant product patent regime and with the increasing takeovers of domestic pharmaceutical companies by foreign players, the drug prices are skyrocketing at unprecedented levels. Thus, increasing drug prices which results in “financial catastrophe” is also a burden to both the patients and public exchequer.

Issues such as social and economic stratification and resultant exclusion in the access to health services is another important area of concern. India being highly stratified society in terms of caste, class and gender, the inequities are very much reflected in the health outcomes as well to a great extent. Rural and urban divide in the health inputs and outcomes is another area of concern for the health policy makers. Similarly some of the tribal areas of different parts of India have one of the worst health indicators of the region.

Even though the government has introduced massive programmes such as National Health Mission (NHM), the health sector still continues to face systemic problems. The state level discrepancy in health indicators is one of the areas of concern when national level programmes are planned and implemented. A systematic approach which includes preventive, promotive, rehabilitative and curative aspects is needed to deal with the health issues in India.

Social work in public health course aims to equip students with an interdisciplinary understanding of India’s health system as well as health problems so that they will have a better understanding of the health realities in India. The course also aims develop evidence-based, context-specific and resource-sensitive practitioners of public health. The course also aims to develop skills in social work professionals to analyse health issues and problems at micro, meso and macro levels.

It is envisaged that students of this course might make choices that include working with individuals, families, groups and communities in difficult settings across national and international NGOs, government agencies, becoming independent practitioners and activists, or engage in research based work.

In the 4th and 5th year, the students can continue with the interdisciplinary/disciplinary Master's programmes offered from the campus or can exit after the completion of three years.

Programme Structure

(Two degrees with one admission process at 10+2 level)

- BA degree: A student who successfully completes the credited and non-credited requirements of the three-year (six semesters) programme will be awarded a B.A. Social Sciences degree.
- Exit or Continuation Option: The graduating students can exercise one of the two options: move out of TISS campus with a B.A. Degree; or move to one of the Masters' programmes offered by the same campus, based on certain laid out criteria.
- No Entrance Test in Case of Continuation: Students opting to pursue a Master's Programme in the same TISS campus from where they obtained their Bachelor's degree can do so without appearing for an entrance test for any of the Masters Degree programme offered in the same TISS campus.
- Admission Test for Inter-Campus Mobility: Those who wish to shift to another TISS campus must go through admission test for lateral entry to any of the Masters programmes of that campus.
- Candidates can apply to this programme in any one campus only. Transfers between the campuses are not permitted at any stage of the process of admission.

5.1.1 Evaluation Process

For the B.A.S.S. course, the total number of credits over 3 years is 90 credits. The method of assessment for the B.A.S.S. courses may vary according to various courses. The course instructor usually decides the nature of assessment prior to the beginning of the course and informs the concern students and examination department accordingly. The assessments may consists of a periodic closed or open book written tests, oral tests or class presentation, quiz, debates, project work, assignments and final examination. Additionally there will be activities like Experiential Learning course (credited and non-credited), writing research report and so on to assess observational, analytical, critical thinking and presentation skills. Relative proportions of various types of assessments may be decided as per the guidelines of the Institute.

6. Rules and Guidelines

Rules are subject to modification from time to time. Modified rules will be accordingly communicated as applicable

6.1. Rules and Guidelines Concerning Coursework, Attendance and Assessment

Each programme leading to the award of a degree comprises a predefined set of courses of study which may include courses, research study and activities each of which is assigned specific credits value or may be non-credited but compulsory. Each programme is defined by a minimum requirement of total credits to be completed satisfactorily for the purpose of award of degree, within a stipulated minimum and maximum period of study. Courses, dissertation and course-related activities which may be conducted in and off campus are of the following kinds:

6.1.1 Semester Registration System

Students are required to register online for joining Semester II, III, IV, V & VI. Registering for all semesters prior to its commencement is a mandatory requirement for all students of TISS. The semester registration system will chart the academic progression and mobility of students across semesters so that all requirements for the award of degree are completed in a systematic and orderly manner. All students must follow the procedure detailed below for the Semester Registration System, failing which they will not be allowed to continue the programme of study.

- Login to the Student Academic Management System at <http://stud-mgmt.tiss.edu>.
- View the course being offered for the Semester you are registering for. These will be shown as Core, Optional and CBCS.
- Choose the courses (core, optional, audit/extra credit, CBCS, etc.) as applicable for the particular semester. Your School Secretariat has already mapped the courses (Core, Optional and CBCS) available to you in that Semester.
- Upload a copy of your Aadhar Card.
- If you are GoI-PMS or other scholarship student, upload the relevant pages of the passbook of the linked bank account.
- Depending on the semester you are registering in, upload receipts of all fees paid (Hostel and Dining Hall) for the Semester you are registering for.
- After you have selected the courses and the documents are uploaded, a message will be displayed in pop up dialog box: "Registration Complete- Pending Verification".
- The Registration Form will appear in the respective School Secretariat's dashboard. The Secretariats will review the form and confirm the semester registration for the student.

6.1.2 Courses

- 6.1.2.1 A course is a prescribed content of a curriculum, with a set number of lessons/lectures as approved by the Academic Council of TISS. All programmes consist of compulsory and optional courses offered in each semester. All courses carry credits with clear distribution of hours of teaching. Course credit value may vary from 1 to 10. In general one credit refers to 15 hours of instruction and of 30 hours of self study. A few courses may not carry any credit, but would be compulsory to attend (eg., Research Seminar).

- 6.1.2.2 Following the UGC directive, Choice based Credit System (CBCS) is introduced, wherein the students are required to undertake a certain number of courses to accumulate the required credits over II & III semesters. A basket of courses is available in these two semesters from which students are required to select any two courses of their interest in order to accumulate a total of 4 credits. Currently, 4 CBCS credits are allotted for students in each study program. This is specified in the course content of the respective programme. (Note: Variations observed in the total number of CBCS credits in some programmes is on account of the nature and total credit load for that programme. For more details see section on Choice Based Credit System).
- 6.1.2.3 Students have a choice of auditing optional courses. However, the norms pertaining to attendance and regularity remain the same for compulsory and audit courses. A course is delivered in the form of face to face instruction or through prescribed self study with mentoring and/or with online support which will take place over the duration of a semester or in concentrated periods during a contact period or in modular formats. Courses are taught and assessed by or undertaken under the guidance of one or more faculty.
- 6.1.2.4 Field-based/practical courses are described variously as block field placement, rural practicum, field practicum, practicum, internship undertaken as per pre-defined schedule of activities. Field work comprises 7.5 hours of practical sessions per day. Depending on the curriculum structure of each academic programme, the field based experiential learning is credited or non-credited. The norms pertaining to regularity in attendance and fulfilling the requirements of the course are at par with taught courses. A supervisor and field coordinator(s), at particular field sites/agencies/organizations, coordinate these sets of activities. The faculty supervisor and/or the field work supervisor conduct assessments of student's field work performance. Details of the field components are available under programme descriptions of respective schools.

6.1.3 Research Study

Described variously as Dissertation, Project, Research Project, involve research work to be undertaken individually by a student under the guidance of a faculty member or members. The duration of research study often spans more than two semester and is credited variously by the different academic programmes depending on the weightage given to this activity in the curriculum structure.

6.1.4 Additional Activities

This includes Rural camp, Study tours, Workshops and other non-credited compulsory activities as prescribed by various programmes. All of above types of activities mentioned in 6.1.2.1, 6.1.2.2, 6.1.2.3 and 6.1.2.4 will be together referred to as courses of study

6.1.5 Assessment Unit

Each course of study, credited or non-credited, taught or field related, or research study, will be assessed through the following assessment unit types with prescribed weightages, as per a pre-defined schedule, which is provided at the commencement of a semester. These may involve individual or group work:

- 6.1.5.1 Assignments—which are held in the course of the semester, conducted as individual or group assessments may take the following forms:

- (i) Class presentations—individual or group which are held during the semester.
 - (ii) Reflective journals or field diaries
 - (iii) Reports or dissertations or productions
 - (iv) Faculty assessment of class participation or field work, or process aspects of field work or dissertation/research.
 - (v) Examinations/Tests (open book, closed book, take home) conducted during or at the end of the semester
 - (vi) Viva/oral test or examination
 - (vii) Written assignments
 - (viii) Observation by faculty/supervisor
- 6.1.5.2 Non-credited compulsory requirements of programmes require certificates of participation/ completion and also include evaluative components, which may be mentioned in testimonials.
- 6.1.5.3 No course has only one type of evaluation instrument (for example, 100% assignment or 100% written exam). Each course has a minimum of two and a maximum of three components for assessment. Assessment units could be a combination of an assignment and a written examination or two assignments or two tests. Weightage of the written examination will not exceed 60% of the total evaluation.
- 6.1.5.4 In general the total number of assessment units will not exceed the number of credits of the course. For e.g. a two credit course is assessed by two units of assessment—an assignment and an examination or two assignments or two examinations.
- 6.1.5.5 A student is required to attempt each mode of assessment independently.
- 6.1.5.6 Non- submission of an assignment will be treated as failed in the course and the student will be given supplementary for that course after completion of all modes of assessment.
- 6.1.5.7 In case of failure in courses worth more than 4 credits (i.e. failure in 3 courses of 2 credits each or 5 courses of 1 credit each) in a semester, the student shall not be allowed to proceed to the next semester and will have to drop studies for the academic year and rejoin the same semester in the next academic year. It shall be shown as “Repeat Semester” in the Grade sheet.

6.1.6 Programme Completion/Credit Requirements Fulfilment

- 6.1.6.1 The programme requirements include credited and non-credited activities.
- 6.1.6.2 The cumulative grade point average (CGPA) is computed as the credit-weighted average over all courses undertaken over previous and current semesters, of all credits accumulated until that assessment period. The CGPA is reported to one place of decimal and is also reported at the end of each semester on the semester grade card.
- 6.1.6.3 A student must obtain a minimum CGPA of 4.0 in each semester, in order to remain in the programme.
- 6.1.6.4 A student must maintain a CGPA of 4.0 points to be considered to have completed the programme successfully.
- 6.1.6.5 The grade earned in a given course will be credited to the student only if he/she has the requisite attendance.

- 6.1.6.6 Students having shortage of attendance as per section 6.1.10. will be considered as failed and will be assigned a zero grade point in the course, even if the assignments have been submitted and tests have been taken. The students will have to undergo supplementary assessments or repeat the course, as the case may be, in a future semester.
- 6.1.6.7 All assignments must be completed and submitted as per the predefined schedule.
- 6.1.6.8 Submission to be done strictly in accordance with the guidelines provided by the teacher such as,
- Hard copy submission to the School/Centre Secretariat on the announced date.
 - Hard copy submission to the course teacher on the announced date.
 - Submission by email on the announced date.
 - Submission via Moodle on the announced date.
- 6.1.6.9 Submission of assignments in any mode other than specified in the notification and/or submitted beyond the announced date/time will be treated as supplementary examination. In such cases, the student will be given '0' (zero) grade and the assignment submitted may be considered as supplementary.
- 6.1.6.10 Non-completion of fieldwork or internship amounts to failure to fulfil the requirement of pass in a semester or year, as the case may be. In such cases of non-completion of fieldwork/internship, the student will not be promoted to the next semester. The student may be admitted to the subsequent semester / year, after successful completion and assessment of the fieldwork/internship.

6.1.9.1 The grade point of a course is computed by taking the weighted average of the grade point received on each assessment unit and rounding off to one decimal point.

6.1.9.2 A student must receive a minimum of 4.0 grade points, to be considered pass in a given course.

6.1.10 Attendance

6.1.10.1 Attendance in class and fieldwork is compulsory. Every student is expected to maintain regularity and 100% attendance for all programme requirements: (i) all classes for the courses for which the student is registered, (ii) field practicum, (iii) field trips, (iv) internships, etc. A minimum of 75% attendance is required for all taught courses.

6.1.10.2 Biometric Attendance

Biometric attendance is an institutional norm and all students are required to follow it. The biometric data are linked only to the attendance system, not to any other databases and the same shall be destroyed once the students graduate from the Institute.

6.1.10.3 Operational guidelines and policy for marking biometric attendance for students:

- (i) Students will mark their biometric attendance twice in each class. The first attendance will be marked within the first 10 minutes of each lecture slot and the second within the last 10 minutes of the lecture slot. Attendance will be awarded only if the biometric attendance is marked twice during class hours. For example, if the class is between 9.00 to 11.00 am, the first attendance will be marked between 9.00 to 9.10 am and the second between 10.50 to 11.00 am. If the student marks attendance between 9.11 am to 10.49 am, the software will ignore it while processing attendance.
- (ii) When students have subsequent lectures scheduled at the same venue, biometric attendance will have to be registered again at the start of the subsequent lecture in the manner as explained above.
- (iii) It is the responsibility of the students to give manual attendance to the Teacher/Instructor if they are unable to register biometric attendance due to technical issues. The Teacher /Instructor will hand over the manual attendance to the concerned School Secretariat, who will then make the attendance entry in the student management system.

6.1.10.4 Attendance for Courses

- (1) Absence upto 25%: May be condoned by the Dean of the School. Remaining absent for 25% of the time is not a matter of right, but a measure to support students meet medical or health issues or for personal and family crises.
- (2) Absence from 26–33%: Not eligible to appear for the examination. Can appear for the Supplementary examination whenever it is scheduled to be held.
- (3) Absence above 33%: would automatically lead to Repeating the Course when offered in the next academic year.

This includes absence due to medical emergencies as well.

6.1.10.5 The schedule of holidays declared by the Institute for classes and in fieldwork setting will be applicable for the period of fieldwork as well.

6.1.10.6 Absences for medical or other exigent reasons can be taken with permission through a leave application submitted to the Programme Coordinator. For full-time, on-campus courses, leave up to 7 days may be granted by the Programme Coordinator. Leave above 7 days, may be granted in consultation with the Chairperson/Dean. In no case, can this exceed 25%.

6.1.10.7 Students who have less than 75% attendance in any course will not be allowed to undertake the final assessment component such as end of semester examination or a final assignment, and will be declared ‘failed’ in the course. In such cases, further appearance in examination or completion of assessments will be treated as supplementary.

6.1.10.8 Students who have less than 75% attendance in any two courses will be declared as ‘failed’ in those courses and will be required to appear for the supplementary examinations in those two courses, whenever they are conducted. Students who have less than 75% attendance in more than two courses will be required to repeat the semester the following year.

6.1.10.9 Students who repeat a course, or courses, due to shortage of attendance or for failure in the regular examination and the two supplementary examinations, will be marked as “Repeat Course” in the Grade Card, whenever they clear it in a subsequent semester.

6.1.10.10 Attendance for Fieldwork/Internship

- (a) Attendance is compulsory on all days of fieldwork/internship.

- 6.1.11.1 Students are required to select the optional courses/specialisations offered in the subsequent semester by submitting the Course Registration Form to the respective School Secretariats or through the online mechanism at the end of each semester. Programmes that have all compulsory courses in a particular semester may not call for course registrations.
- 6.1.11.2 This will enable the School Secretariats to scrutinise possible class size, timetable constraints, fulfillment of eligibility requirements, etc.

Important: The same choice(s) of courses, must be indicated during the Semester Registration Process.

6.1.12 Dissertations / Theses / Self Study Courses /Research Reports/ Field Reports

- 6.1.12.1 Dissertations / theses / field reports, etc. are carried out in phases and are assessed on two counts: process and product evaluation.

Those students who have cleared the course through Supplementary/Improvement mode stand disadvantaged as the grade achieved will not be considered for award of any prize when the degree is awarded for the programme to which the students belong to. This norm will apply, even if the student tops the class/fieldwork/research as the case may be.
- 6.1.13.12 Students who have failed or have supplementary for more than 4 credits (that is, failure in 3 courses of 2 credits each or in 5 courses of 1 credit each) in a semester or accumulated over two or more semesters will be deemed failed and will not be promoted to the next semester. The re-evaluator, however, will not be a member of the re-evaluation committee and he/she will not be a member of the Centre to which either the student or his/her examiner belongs.

- 6.1.14.6 Re-evaluation will be done for all re-evaluable components of the course / fieldwork / internship / research project.
- 6.1.14.7 The concerned faculty member, who taught the course and assessed the student, will submit a note along with the grade sheet and answer book/assignments, with a view to enlighten the re-evaluator on the course content and the emphasis given by him/her, while teaching the course, and the broad criteria followed in the assessment.
